25X12. There was a civilian firing range in Tunari [4434N-2609E] which belonged to a Civilian Hunters' Association and was in good condition. There was a .22 caliber weapons' range with approximately 40 targets of 50 and 100 m. A cement building served as a pistol range and had two targets at 25 m. There also was a skeet range. An additional rifle range with targets at 100 and 300 m was under construction.

25X1
3. [redacted] 50 militia men [redacted] arrived in trucks daily and spent the entire day firing on the range. They fired automatic weapons most of the time, usually the PPSH. Some of the troops were in civilian clothing and spoke Russian. The vehicles which brought the troops to the Tunari firing range were post war Czech model PRAGA trucks which were painted dark green. Approximately 20 men could be carried in each truck. [redacted] no further information on the firing range.
